With longer days and a lot more sun, summer is a great time to be drinking. And in the past few months, New York has seen a crop of exciting new bars popping up on the scene. Whether you're a cocktail nerd geeking out on thoughtfully-designed drinks or a rooftop chaser looking for #views, here are the 10 best new bars to visit right now.

The Golden Hour

This year's seasonal summer pop-up at the High Line Hotel debuted in May and will stay open until mid-October, weather permitting. Helmed by the team behind James Beard Award-winning Maison Premiere and Greenpoint charmer Sauvage, the tropically-fitted outdoor bar serves refreshing, weather-appropriate cocktails like a ginger-accented Pimm's Cup variation and a fun, frozen take on a Blue Hawaii. The star of bartender Will Elliott's menu, however, is the beloved frozen negroni with Jerez vermouth and seasonal citrus. Soak it up with lobster rolls, fish and chips, and an array of raw-bar options. 180 10th Ave., 212-933-9735
