The Mark

The spot where many a celebrity gets ready before the Met Gala each year, The Mark is flawlessly elegant in its Jacques Grange-designed interiors and Upper East Side luxury. Grab one of the hotel's custom bikes or hop in a black-and-white striped pedicab to hit up the nearby 5th Avenue boutiques—though you don't have to leave the hotel for the finest in high-end shopping, pampering and dining. The Mark offers room service prepared by renowned chef Jean-Georges Vongerichten, sweet treats by Ladurée, a Frédéric Fekkai salon, and 24/7 access to Bergdorf Goodman for it's penthouse guests.
The Carlyle

This storied establishment is an icon of elegance and luxury in the city. A timeless capsule of classic New York, the Carlyle oozes 1930s glamour from the moment you step into the black-and-white marbled lobby. Guests are treated to the utmost in amenities and services, including in-house boutiques for everything from florists to art galleries and nearby designer shopping at Vera Wang, Perrin Paris and more. The rooms are impeccably appointed with posh decor and the luxe bathrooms come fully stocked with a generous range of Kiehl's bath products.

Crosby Street Hotel

Consider this a little oasis of British charm in the middle of an urban metropolis. The Crosby Street Hotel, a charming spot tucked away on a quiet cobblestone street in the heart of SoHo, features eclectic, vintage-inspired decor in its light-filled rooms and bathrooms stocked with products from London-based perfumer Miller Harris. Every day, guests can enjoy a traditional English tea served in The Crosby Bar.

It doesn't get more five-star than Four Seasons. The 52-story building boasts 360-degree views of the city, including the coveted rooms overlooking Central Park. Accommodations are not only well-fitted, but spacious—and not just by NYC standards. Rooms start at a cushy 500 square feet and expand from there. Splurge on the Four Seasons' $55,000-a-night Ty Warner Penthouse and you'll enjoy a sprawling 4,300 square feet of extravagant luxury, including four glass balconies, a chauffeured Rolls Royce Phantom, 24/7 butler service and unlimited caviar, champagne and in-room massages.

As expected from a hotel in one of New York City's most exclusive neighborhoods, the Gramercy Park Hotel is a lavish and opulent choice of accommodation. The chic design combines a bohemian flair for color and textures with more serious baroque elements for a wholly regal feel. Plus, the space more or less doubles as an art museum with its constantly rotating collection of contemporary works by Basquiat, Warhol, and others.

Part-owned by Robert de Niro, the Greenwich Hotel maintains an unassuming, quiet comfort. Wood-beamed ceilings and exposed brick are matched in their rustic sensibility by the tufted leather seating and fireplace, while a Japanese influence is evident in the folding room dividers, shoji-style panels, and the serene courtyard garden. The pièce de résistance, however, is the underground pool and Shibui Spa, which sits beneath a 250-year-old bamboo and reclaimed wood roof.

Elegant and upscale, with a decidedly European feel, the NoMad Hotel is where anyone who wishes she were French should stay. The hotel is housed in a turn-of-the-century Beaux Arts building with interiors by French designer Jacques Garcia, who drew inspiration from his own childhood apartment in Paris. The rooms are cozy, but elegantly appointed, featuring large beds with studded leather headboards, velvet tapestries, antique Heriz rugs, and free-standing clawfoot bathtubs. C'est très chic.

The Baccarat Hotel

Designed to mimic a Parisian pied-a-terre in the heart of Manhattan, the Baccarat hotel is by far one of the most glamorous stays in the city. Situated right off Fifth Avenue, and right next door to the MoMa, spend your mornings taking a dip in the spa's pool, and then indulge in a treatment at the Spa de La Mer. If you're feeling fancy, stay in the hotel's namesake suite, pictured here, to enjoy La Mer and Laduree amenities, complimentary evening blowouts in the hotel salon, white glove butler service and more.

Times Square may be the heart of New York City, but its touristy vibe certainly doesn't make you feel like one of the city's best kept hospitality secrets sits within walking distance from its billboard-clad center. One of the chicest properties in the city, The Chatwal is an Art Deco gem, well-suited with handsome furnishings, luxury service and The Lambs Club, a culinary destination with celebrity chef Geoffrey Zakarian at its helm. Head here if you're looking for luxury with a boutique feel—the property is a Luxury Collection hotel—and an alluring alternative to the at-times to the more over the top properties scattered along Fifth Avenue.

A city hotel with a natural feel, the 1 Hotel aims to bring the outdoors (and then some, given that we're talking about nature-sparse NYC) indoors, for an organic yet luxurious feel in the heart of a major city. Expect natural touches in every room, but don't anticipate glamping, or rusticity of any sort–this property is more about thoughtful decor and sustainability than a hippie dippie vibe. 1 Hotel (which has another location on Central Park) is all about laid-back luxury, and knowing that your food and decor has been responsibly and thoughtfully sourced.

The Nolitan was made for stylish twenty-something millennials. Not only is the area ripe for chic boutique shopping, but the hotel itself is Instagram gold with its sleek mid-century modern aesthetic. Guests can rent a bike (or skateboard, if you dare) and cruise around the neighborhood, or play on the available Xbox, Playstation 3 or Wii consoles. Then once you're done indulging your youthful side, be sure to catch the complimentary wine and cheese served at happy hour.

The Ritz-Carlton New York, Central Park

When it comes to location, this can't be beat. Opening up directly to Central Park, the Ritz-Carlton New York puts you in the lap of luxury. Focused more on serving its guests than luring in the general city public, the Ritz maintains a sense of privacy and sanctuary once inside its big glass doors. It's royal treatment all the way. Guests have the opportunity to arrange for a personal trainer or a beautiful picnic in Central Park, along with access to the hotel's premiere La Prairie Spa. In the rooms, you'll have all the Asprey bath products you could need, plus the choice of seven different types of pillows and sateen or terry robes.

Ace Hotel

A hotbed for hipsters and a mecca for the artsy cool kids, freelance creatives and other movers and shakers of Manhattan, the Ace Hotel has built a strong culture and community for itself. While most of the rooms may be on the small side (unless you throw down for a larger room or the 711-square-foot Loft Suite), the amenities are topnotch (curated minibars, super-plush robes, round-the-clock room service—some even have turntables or an acoustic guitar). The main guest areas with their long wooden tables and free Wi-Fi are made for communal hang-outs.

The James is everything we all aspire to be: chic, modern, and eco-friendly. Nestled in New York's SoHo neighborhood, the trendy hotel features reclaimed wood floors, filtered water instead of bottled, waste-reducing bath products, and linens made of entirely natural materials. Each floor is decorated in art by a different individual artist, and the Jimmy rooftop bar with its 360-degree views is one of the hottest spots in downtown Manhattan.

The Surrey

This UES gem situated in a beautiful Beaux-Arts building is uptown-chic at its finest. Fashion lovers will appreciate the Chanel-inspired quilted wall in the Surrey's Bar Pleiades, along with the six-foot portrait of Kate Moss that greets guests as they enter the lobby's elevator bank. The sleek black-and-gray scheme and Art Deco-inspired finishings only add to the stylish, contemporary feel.
